

300-HOUR GOAL IS NOW IN SIGHT FOR TWO PILOTS

Jackson and O'Brine Cruise On, Piling Up Hours In Long Flight

WATCHERS ARE MANY

Refueling Contacts Said to Be Perfect Throughout Flight

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 25.—(INS).—Their 300-hour goal was in sight for Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, indefatigable pilots of the stout St. Louis Robin, as they cruised on today, piling up a prodigious total of hours to their sustained flight record.

The Robin's scudding red and white lights high overhead and the muffled, steady coughing of the motor's exhaust kept ground watchers reassured that all was well with the endurance team and the orange-colored monoplane.

Jackson and O'Brine had flown 283 hours at 2:17 a. m. (C. S. T.). They have vowed for days they would not quit until they had attained 300 hours.

That they will not land before Friday was the prediction of Maj. William B. Robertson, head of the company which built the plane.

"Refueling contacts in the past few days have been perfect," he said, "which means the ship is under absolute control."

In contrast with the immense, boisterous throng that overflowed Lambert Field Tuesday night after the record was shattered, there were less than 5,000 persons at the airport last night. Long before midnight the pilots ceased sending down notes and settled down to the monotonous task of keeping their monoplane high in the air.

A full load of 120 gallons of gasoline was fed into the Robin's tank last night after the flyers had eaten a meal of chicken, slaw, chocolate cake and milk.

Then they visited Mr. Ayars' father at Massillon, Ohio, and he took them to different places of interest, including the McKinley Monument at Canton, Ohio; the steel mills at Massillon.

The group also spent some time with Mrs. Louis Seimet, who motored them to various points of interest in Massillon and surrounding cities.

Accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Ayars was the former's grandmother, of Bridgeton, N. J., who is 72 years of age.

"Billion Dollar City" Passes 186th Hour in the Air

HOUSTON, Texas, July 25.—The monoplane "Billion Dollar City," was soaring in the clouds above the Houston airport at 7:49.30 a. m. today, completing its 186th hour in the air, as the pilots, Joe Glass and S. L. Loomis, entered into the eighth day of their attempt to set a new refueling endurance record.

Houston business men, headed by Ray Fogle, started a subscription list for the flyers in the event they set a new record.

Trenton Youth's Skull Fractured; Police Say Beer Found in Car

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Owen Kane, 22 years old, of 79 Ward avenue, Trenton, N. J., is suffering from a fractured skull in the Frankford Hospital as a result of an automobile accident near Langhorne on Tuesday. His condition is said to be serious. Joseph Felkenrich, 22 years old, of 225 Walnut avenue, Trenton, driver of the car in which Kane was injured, is being held in Doylestown on the charge of reckless driving, operating a car after his license had been revoked and illegal transportation of liquor. Alfred Scarborough, 23 years old, of 364 Cleveland avenue, Trenton, is held as a material witness.

Felkenrich told Patrolman Rubican, of the Langhorne State Highway Patrol, that he was en route to Baltimore with Kane and Scarborough to visit friends. The car struck a pole and Kane was thrown against the windshield. Police say they found two cases of alleged high-powered beer in the tonneau of the machine.

Detective Brist, of Trenton, learned that Felkenrich took the machine without the consent of his father, the owner. Felkenrich was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Alvey at Woodbourne and held without bail for Grand Jury action.

CRAFTS LODGE AT CAMP BUCCOU IS NEARLY FINISHED

Erected Through Efforts of Kiwanis Club of Doylestown

HELPS THE BOY SCOUTS

Over-Night Hikes Indulged In By the Lads Are Very Much Enjoyed

The Doylestown Kiwanis Club, Crafts Lodge is completed with the exception of the laying of the concrete floor for the basement which the contractors will complete some time during the coming week.

Camp Buccou, with the completion of the beautiful shack so constructed that it has a charming rustic arrangement, will make it possible to offer an extensive course in practical merit badge subjects to each Scout at Buccou. The merit badges are woodcarving, woodworking, archery, aviation, leathercraft, leatherwork, basketry, bookbinding, carpentry, handicraft, on the main floor; and in the basement cement work, metal work and pottery and masonry. The donation of the building to Camp Buccou has been of great value in furthering the vocational program of merit badges offered the boys through Scouting. The Crafts Lodge is open to the Cubs, the boys from 9 to 12, at Buccou for 1-4 hours each day when they are given the privilege and instructed in wood, cardboard and basketry objects. The presentation of the lodge to Camp Buccou is the result of the splendid cooperation of the many members of the Doylestown Kiwanis Club in the carrying out of their motto "We Build" of which vocational guidance is one of their major objectives.

Several other buildings are needed, such as a first aid station, rest lodge, museum, cub recreational building, wash houses and a combined mess and recreational hall for complete facilities at camp. Several other service clubs are investigating as to what they can do and it looks as though additional buildings will be constructed within the next two or three years.

With the Wednesday over-night hike in which every Scout at camp leaves Buccou and camps with the members of his patrol at some previously selected site at which time the Scouts sleep out in the open, prepare their own meals and arrange the details of a safe and happy camp site, the Scouts for the second week of the camp season returned home on Saturday a happier, browner and healthier group of boys.

The stunt night on Thursday evening was especially enjoyable as well as the mysterious staff show on Tuesday evening. Scoutmaster Robert G. Belville with a group of his scouts from Yardley were again at the ceremonial campfire. Mr. Belville was the speaker of the evening and presented one of the most interesting and stirring talks on carriages that has ever been given at Buccou. Every Scout at camp this year is receiving a thorough physical examination of which a copy will be sent to the parents at the close of the camping season. This plan has been developed through the suggestions of life insurance companies that a yearly check up would avoid future illness. At least 400 visitors were at Buccou the last week-end and many attended the chapel services in the beautiful hillside glen at 3:15 last Sunday. The talk of Scout Leader Theodore Andreas was inspirational to the many parents who attended the chapel and the Scouts and Cubs present.

An invitation to every one in Bucks county to attend the Sunday afternoon chapel at 3:15 D. S. T. is cordially given. It was surprising last Sunday at dinner the speed with which 30 quarts of ice cream was consumed by 75 campers. The generous helping of ice cream as Sunday dessert has been one of the outstanding features on the camp menu.

Scout Commissioners for the third week of camp were: Mayor William Paul, of Langhorne; clerk, Norman Felde, of Morrisville; commissioner of health, Jack Gruver, of Trevoise; commissioner of highways, David Hostert, of Newtown; commissioners of building, Earl Brunner, of Langhorne; commissioner of safety, David Paul, of Langhorne. Cub commission elections for the third week were: Mayor Edward Wallace, of Bristol; clerk, Jack Thompson, of Bristol; commissioner of health, George Talbot, of Bristol; commissioner of highways, Frank Parr, of Bristol; commissioner of building, Jack Wischer, of Bristol; commissioner of safety, Robert Bertollette, of Bristol.

TOWER AT WASHINGTON CROSSING PLANNED FOR

Will Afford Splendid View of Countryside and Historic Site

WILL BE 120 FEET HIGH

Plans for a stone tower with beacon light, 120 feet in height, to be built on Bowman's Hill, near Washington's Crossing and affording a view of the entire site on which General Washington had his concentration camp prior to the battles of Trenton and Princeton, were adopted by the Washington Crossing Park Commission of Pennsylvania, at a special meeting held at Hawthorn, the pretty country home of Allen W. Hagenbach, president of the mission, along the Little Lehigh Parkway, Lehigh county.

This commission met shortly after noon, considered the plans which were prepared by Arthur Cowell, landscape architect of State College, and then adopted them and arranged to go ahead with the work. It was the decision of the commission to proceed with the development of outlying areas of the park, now that the large areas near the crossing itself have been developed and the historic spots have been suitably memorialized.

The first spot selected for this development is Bowman's Hill, behind which the Continental troops were hidden as they concentrated for the victorious surprise attack on Trenton and Princeton after Christmas, 1776.

With this tower, it will be possible for visitors to the historic spot to have a bird's eye view of the entire country that was used by General Washington in his preparations and to study the strategy that lay back of his successful plans. The work on the tower will begin just as soon as the executive committee, headed by Henry Y. Pickering, selects the exact spot.

It was announced that the famous Taylor House, across the old Ferry Tavern, has now been put in charge of a hostess, Mrs. Robert Nelson, who will be glad to welcome visitors and patriotic groups. The latter are invited to hold their meetings in the home and will be given dates upon application in advance.

CORONER'S VIEW IN BUCKS COUNTY SHOWS BIG JUMP

Increase of 64.35% in Last Five-Year Period

CONDITIONS CHANGED

Coroner Held 648 Views and 42 Inquisitions In Five Years

DOYLESTOWN, July 24.—Does the fact that coroner's views and inquests have increased greatly during the last five years in Bucks County as compared to a five-year period from 1911 to 1915 inclusive, mean that the Eighteenth Amendment is not as effective as the Brooks High License Law?

That would be an interesting question for debate, for in the days of the Brooks High License Law it was a common saying that "if it were not for deaths from alcoholism the coroner would go out of business."

The fact that coroner's views have increased 64.35 per cent during the last five years as compared to the 1911-1915 period and that coroner's inquisitions have increased 45 per cent over the same period, shows at least that violent deaths, suicides, death from automobile accidents, murders, death from drowning and natural causes are on the increase.

Records in the office of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions Court where the coroner's records are filed, show that 648 views and 42 inquisitions were held in Bucks county in the last five years, as compared to 417 views and 19 inquisitions from 1911 to 1915.

The 45 per cent increase in the number of inquisitions is due to the great increase of fatal automobile accidents, caused in most cases by reckless driving.

Back in 1909 the state legislature passed a law making it illegal to drive an automobile while drunk and in 1913 the first violation of that kind came before the county court. The defendant was fined $100 and was placed under bond to keep the peace. During 1928 there were seventy-five defendants before the Court for operating an automobile while drunk.

During the years 1911, 1912 and 1913 there were but eighteen liquor law violations cases before the county courts while in 1928 there were thirty-six, not counting the seventy-five drunken drivers who would not have been there had it not been they imposed the intoxicating liquor.

One of the county prosecutors pointed out yesterday that the increase in the number of drunken drivers in the last five years does not mean that the Volstead Act is not as effective as the Brooks High License Law because there are many more automobiles today. During the period from 1911 to 1915, it was pointed out, not as many young people drove machines as today, and the enforcement of the drunken driver act was not as rigid as today.

On the other hand, an examination of the coroner's views and inquests during the last five years as compared to the 1911-1915 period, shows an increase in deaths due to alcoholism and bootleg liquor.

In 1911 there were 87 views made by the coroner. In 1920, the first year after the Volstead Act became a law there were 79 views and six inquisitions, a slight decrease. Since 1920 the increase in views has been as follows: 1924, 107; 1925, 122; 1926, 129; 1927, 143; 1928, 147.

Most of the cases where there was some evidence of excessive use of alcohol being the cause of death during the last five years, there was evidence of the liquor being poisonous.

Figures like these prove, said one county official yesterday, that people are more careless, reckless and not as law-abiding as they were some years ago. There are many more laws to violate now than there were from 1911 to 1915, which accounts for the increase, to a great extent, of liquor law violations. It is now unlawful to sell, possess, transport or manufacture liquor under the Volstead Act while under the Brooks High License Act there were very few liquor law offenses.

"Much of the lawlessness can be blamed on the increase of young people driving automobiles and at the same time being able to buy, manufacture or transport liquor," one official said. "Whether the Volstead Act can prove more effective than the Brooks High License Law, remains to be seen. One thing is sure, something is causing the great increase in the number of coroner's views and inquests."

That people have more money in bank and more people own homes now than they did before the Volstead Act went into operation, is a certainty," said a local banker yesterday when asked for his opinion. "I believe the passing of the saloon has made more families happy than any one thing in the history of our country. The increase of crime in Bucks county in the last five years as compared to a previous period means, I believe, that more people think too lightly about law violations."

THE THINKER

From his office window he looks down into the streets below. In front of him the excavations are being made for a great building. He observes the laborers. How different they are! How slowly they move! What time they waste lighting cigarettes, standing and looking, joking together, disputing over their tools. For 10 whole minutes he watches and finds not a single man intent upon his job.

And that crowd standing agape on the street regarding wonderingly the deft movements of the steam shovel. There they will remain looking on instead of going about their business, wasting the time of their employers. Next they will saunter off to peer in shop windows, or to crowd about a truck that has broken down or to watch a man painting a flag pole. And they will return home to tell their wives what a hard day they have had.

He ponders. Can this be the spirit that has made America? Or has the sturdy pioneer yielded to the shirker? Is the national blood beginning to thin? Where is the old sense of responsibility and self-reliance? Where the old delight in doing a solid day's work?

With a sigh he looks at his watch. It is time to go to lunch with his discussion group. He tells his secretary he should be back in a couple of hours. And will she please have the letters ready for him to sign upon his return, as he is leaving early this afternoon. They have cancelled the conference as the general manager is playing in the golf tournament. He sets out for lunch, regarding the shop windows on the way, and pausing to observe a motor car that has stalled at an intersection and to join a crowd around a street musician. Once more he is impressed with the universal tendency toward idleness. It disturbs him.

Two hours for lunch. Gazing out of a window. Sauntering on the street. Leaving the letters to the secretary. Going home early. What is the difference between this man and the shirkers over whom he feels concern? Well, you see, he is a thinker.

SLOW MEDICINE

There are hurts to the heart and conscience which are quickly healed and forgotten, needing only a little good sense to bring about their cure. There are others which are too deep for surface remedy and will leave a scar long after they are mended by the slow medicine of time.

Such hurts cannot be ignored or put away from mind and memory by an intention to forget them. A chance word or experience will tear them wide again, so that their pain and danger come back to fresh life. If a man will be cured of a serious wound, he must face its pains like a man and, if needful, suffer more in order that he may at last be healed. So with a serious sin, a deep grief or bitter hurt. These must be faced with courage and their wound kept clean of the evils of bitterness, self-pity and excuse, or else they grow malignant and threaten death to the spirit.

Given this much of help, time works its slow healing. The scar remains, but the man is whole again. It is slow medicine, but the law of nature and the laws that rule the spirit of man know no other way of cure.

SYNOPSIS

"Welcome Home," a musical comedy, trying out on the road, is owned by Willie Durant, the financial backer, is friendly with Nita French, the star, but, strangely enough, refuses to put up any more money. Behind Nita's back he is attentive to Kitty, the check room girl with stage aspirations, and induces her father, "Dad" Malone, stage doorman, and her sweetheart, Jimmy, head usher, to invest their life savings in the piece. It is Saturday night, and Jerry Connolly, the manager, is unable to pay salaries. Sam Bloom, scenery builder, has come to collect or remove his sets.

"Hey, Jerry, I want to talk to you." It was Jimmy's young eyes full of determination.

Jerry backed away. "What, again? Is it about getting Kitty into the show?"

"Since you brought up the subject, when are you going to put Kitty on," Jimmy insisted.

Jerry groaned. "I've told you a thousand times there's not a chance. Now for the love of Pete stop pestering me. I've got all the troubles of the entire world on my shoulders and I can't stand much more."

"Oh, speaking of pests, that reminds me," the boys smiled brightly.

Bloom calls to collect a bill.

"Sam Bloom is outside. He wants to see you."

"Have a heart! Did you tell him I was back here," the manager demanded anxiously.

"Sure, why not. Haven't you paid for the scenery?"

"Haven't I paid for the scenery? Have I paid for anything?" Jerry shouted. "Get out front, quick! Head him off! Don't let him get back here. Tell him—tell him I've come to Jericho—Asia—China—tell him I just died."

"Don't worry, Jimmy hurried. 'I'll get rid of him for you,' he called back over his shoulder. 'Curtain up!' came the call."

A blast of music swept over the footlights. Jerry heaved a sigh of relief. At least the show was on. A vivid splash of silk-stockinged legs as the line-up of girls went into their dance. Feet tapping, beating out the rhythm. The chorus boys dashed onto the stage singing lustily. Jerry lighted a cigarette, pushed a stick of gum into his mouth, and leaned against a piece of scenery.

"So, there you are!" A short, heavy set man planted himself in front of Jerry, a moody frown on his face.

"Well, well, well. If it isn't old Sam Bloom, himself." Jerry smiled a sickly, half-hearted smile. "That great big prop and scenery magazine! Glad to see you, Sam."

"Yeh? There was a decided question in Sam's voice. 'Your doorman was tickled pink, too. So much so, that he tried to throw me out.'"

"Oh, don't mind that," Jerry apologized. "Most likely he didn't recognize you. I'm glad you dropped in to catch the show. Great little opera we've got here. You'll love it."

"I didn't come to catch the show," Sam returned dryly. "I came to catch you." He pulled a bill out of his pocket and thrust it under Jerry's nose.

Jerry hedged for time. He hadn't a cent to his name, at least, not enough to pay a bill for scenery, and the box office would certainly never be able to cover the amount. And Durant had not as yet put in an appearance at the theatre, he'd have to get out of it some way himself. There was one thing certain, he was going to take the show to Broadway, regardless.

"Now, look here, Sam," he began, "I'm going to pay this bill, certainly I'm going to pay it. Don't I always pay my bills? Now, give me a break, Sam. I happen to be just a little—er—financially embarrassed right at this moment, but—"

"That one won't work either," Sam shook his head decisively. "You've got a swell house out front. I just talked to Georgie in the box office. There's enough to cover a good chunk of this bill."

"Great grief, Sam, you can't take that box office tonight," Jerry caught the man's coat lapels and almost shook him. "Listen, boy, I need that dough to get the show on. Honestly, I've got a property here that'll knock Broadway for a loop. This is good for a summer run. Why man alive, I'll bet we'll be carrying this into next summer."

"Hm! Where have I heard those words before?" Sam sniffed sceptically.

"Well, take a look at it, Sam, take a look at it," Jerry pleaded. "Look at those costumes. Just listen to that number. If you don't think this show won't go over you're a sap. I've got to have all the money that's in that box office tonight just to pay off some of those poor kids. They all know the show's going to be a hit, and they've been stringing along with me. I can't let them down. They've got to eat."

The noise of the mechanism that pulled a painted boat up to the levee drowned out Jerry's words. "Blow that whistle and ring that bell."

Tell the traveler all is well. And he's welcome home. . . . Yes, he's welcome home. Grab his satchels and take his grips.

Plant sweet kisses upon his lips. Cause he's welcome home. . . . Yes! He's welcome home!

"That's what Broadway's going to be singing to us the night we land there," Jerry shouted, trying to make himself heard above the vibrant voices of the chorus as they heralded the arrival of one, Harold Astor, stepping down from the gangplank, resplendent in his white tuxedo suit, enhanced by a pale lavender tie, breast pocket handkerchief, and socks.

A burst of applause came from the audience and resounded happily in Jerry's ears. He must convince Sam that there was money in the show. He knew Sam Bloom. He had done business with him before. Sam either got paid or he took his scenery. And if he took the scenery that would be the end of everything. That scenery had to get to Broadway, and it had to get there as the property of the "Welcome Home" Company. He looked around anxiously, as though hoping to find some solution to his problem.

Even as he looked, he saw a pair of beautifully formed legs moving languorously along behind the backdrop. Flashing stones of purest white scintillated in the gloom of the semi-darkened wings. Nita French strolled slowly, swaying provocatively on her rhinestone studded heels. Her vivid red hair was bright about the oval, creamy-tinted face. The petulant red lips that could tighten into a thin line, and very often did, now looked soft and inviting. Despite her many years on the stage, most of which she had conveniently forgotten, Nita could still make up.

"Well, if it isn't Nita French, herself," Sam Bloom whirled about at the sound of her approaching steps.

"In the flesh, baby, in the flesh!" Nita held out a brilliantly pink-tipped hand in greeting.

Jerry breathed a sigh of relief, glad of any interruption which might turn the attention of Sam Bloom from his desire to collect.

"How are you, Nita?" Sam smiled.

"Fine until I saw you," Nita pouted. "Every time we meet the show I'm in clothes." She waved airily and stepped into the wings waiting for the cue for her entrance.

"Say, I forgot that Nita was in this troupe," Sam spoke thoughtfully, as though a sudden idea had dawned. "That means her boy friend, Willie Durant, is putting up for the show." His tone was more conciliatory. "How come you're so broke, Jerry? Durant's rolling in money. Where is he? I think I'll have a little talk with him myself. Maybe we can get this matter straightened out between us. You're a nice boy, Jerry, and I wouldn't want to do anything to hurt your show."

"Well, as a matter of fact," Jerry began slowly, "Durant sort of went cold on us. Lost his taste for the show business. He's as good as refused to put up another cent. He hasn't turned up this evening yet. I'm waiting for him now."

"Well, what a crust you've got," Sam waxed indignant. "Durant won't back his own show, and you ask me to hold the bag for the scenery?"

"But I'm telling you he went cold on us."

LIVE

where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an unnecessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every opportunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for outdoor recreation.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the community. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.

Modernizing Starts With Interior of the Home

MARKED CHANGES POSSIBLE IN THE AVERAGE HOUSE

INTERIOR DECORATING ONE PHASE OF EFFORT

The Home Modernizing Movement is calculated to improve the home both inside and out. Remodeling may be necessary in many cases where the exterior of the residence still bears the stamp of the architecture of twenty years ago. Yet modernizing rather than the more limited remodeling is the aim of this campaign.

Modernization is an all embracing word. Your home may have the modern lines that are now in vogue yet contain many accessories that are out of date or the home may be lacking in those conveniences that have recently come into such generally accepted use.

Livability of Home Depends on Modernization

Home modernizing really starts with the interior of the home. It is here that the home life functions and it is only right that the home be equipped with the newly devised equipment that makes living so worth while.

Even though the exterior lines of the dwelling be smartly up to date, now is the time to thoughtfully consider the interior to see if you are receiving full satisfaction from it.

Marked changes are possible in the average house. The layout of the rooms is often inconvenient and unsatisfactory. Certain rooms may need enlarging or alterations. A lack of closets is a handicap to the housekeeper. The stairs to the upper floor may be inaccessible or narrow.

Styles Change in Furnishings

Consider also the furnishings of the home. Styles change in furniture and the parlor set of fifteen years ago is now out of date. Carpets, covering the entire floor, were necessary in the days of soft wood but nowadays have been discarded in favor of rugs. Chinese or Oriental rugs may be beyond the limits of the family purse, but domestic rugs of similar pattern and most artistic are available today.

The arrangement of the furniture is new. Years ago the chairs and tables were placed along the walls with stiff formality, but now they are scattered around the rooms in a studied disarray. A cozy, homey atmosphere is secured which is not possible with the more formal arrangement.

New home accessories are constantly being placed on the market. While the average home can purchase furniture at infrequent intervals, new effects can be secured by frequent changes of lamp shades, curtains and drapes, table covers, cushions and the like. It is possible to keep abreast of the times with these moderate priced accessories which make the home always bright and fresh.

New Types of Wall Decorations

Changes in wall decorations are also another angle of home modernizing. Lately canvass covered walls, painted with several coats of flat paint, have been popular. The standard wall paper, however, comes out each year with new designs and color effects and will always remain in vogue.

Many newly constructed homes use no wall covering, the plaster being tinted and finished in a rough yet striking texture.

Plastic paints with which effects in modified texture can be achieved give a finish half way between the smooth plaster and the very rough textured effects. The resulting finish has been described as combining the restraint of the untextured painted wall with the distinction of hard worked plaster. It is universally suitable for the decoration of side walls.

This Handsome Bungalow once a Grimy Cottage

The sweeping roof, lines and attractive entry-way of this bungalow speak of up-to-date architecture. No one would suspect that it was modernized from the weather-beaten single-story house shown below at the left.

You would have to hire a fastidious person to live in this old-timer. Yet when modernized its owners were the envy of the neighborhood. Look above and see what happened!

MODERNIZED COTTAGE NOW A SMART BUNGALOW

Sweeping Lines Enhance The Beauty of Dwelling

After contrasting the two houses shown to the left, doubting Thomases who believe that they are not the same are invited to cast an eagle eye at the house next door, found at the right in each picture.

That the house next door is the same is plainly evident by the group of three windows, and the gable end. The points of contact are evident and prove that these before and after illustrations show what modernization means to the exterior lines of a house.

Once a Lowly Cottage

The smart-looking bungalow at the top of the page was once the lowly cottage shown below it. The sweeping roof lines and arched entrance reveal the spirit of today—a far cry from the ginger-bread adorned architecture of the early nineties.

When the owner of the cottage decided to invest in modernization, he instructed the contractor, first of all, to get rid of the old fashioned front porch with its ugly trimming.

In its place he devised a plain little entry way covered by an extension of the roof which sweeps down in a fascinating curve. An arched entrance with a shingled column supports the extremity of the roof.

Stained Shingles Used

The plain clap-boarding of the older structure has been superseded by shingle sides which add so much to the homey intimate atmosphere of this bungalow. Incidentally stained shingles, stucco, or brick veneer are popular sidings for small houses and permit effective color schemes.

A ventilator with horizontal louvers allows the entrance of air into the attic, insuring a draft in hot summer weather so that heated air will not accumulate and warm the rooms below.

The large fixed bay window that lighted the front room of the house was torn away when the building was modernized. A broad opening filled with two sliding windows now occupies the place. Quaintly paneled wooden shutters flank each window opening at the front. Shutters of this type are usually distinctive and aid in setting the house apart from its neighbors.

ELECTRICAL OUTLETS NECESSARY

Many Electrical Accessories Are Used in Homes of Today

Electrical outlets are much in demand in the modern home. The increased use of electricity and the many varied types of accessories make an abundance of outlets necessary.

The older houses contained few if any outlets, a cord running from the center cluster being necessary if the housewife needed additional service.

The newest houses contain two or three outlets in the mopboard, each room being so equipped.

Often the center cluster of lights in the living room is not used because of the vogue for floor lamps. The appearance of the center cluster adds or detracts from the decorative effect of the room and the cluster should be kept up to date. Changes in design are frequent and the cluster must be renewed occasionally if the room be modern.

Each room of the house has electrical accessories peculiar to it. Outlets are always necessary if full service is to be secured.

Floor lamps are found in many rooms of the house. In the bedroom will be used electric warming pads, heaters and bed lamps. The dining-room needs outlets for electric cooking fixtures, such as toasters, waffle-irons, grills and percolators, since many housewives prepare some dishes at the table.

In the kitchen outlets waist-high are convenient and may be used when electricity is used for cooking. Many housewives iron in the kitchen and outlets must be available for this service.

SUNDAY THEATRES AND MOVIES

One of the most earnest and thoughtful protests against Sunday theatres and moving pictures, made in recent days, comes not from a preacher or reform worker, but from an actor, one of the most distinguished of his profession, George Arliss. In his recently published autobiography, "Up the Years from Bloomsbury," he writes: "If I had my way, I would close all theatres and all movie houses on Sunday. I would make it a day apart. I would withhold all the ordinary amusements except outdoor sports. There is no reason why the day should be dull for anyone. There are always good books. There are hobbies to be pursued. If the worst comes to the worst, why not sit at home and converse for an hour or two? It is surprising how intelligent people can be when you really get to know them."—Christian Advocate.—(Adv.)

HIBERNIANS HOLD FIRST PLACE POSITION

By T. M. Juno

The Hibernians kept their first place position in the Twilight League by giving the Colored A. C. a 13-3 setback. The game was uninteresting throughout. The colored team never was in the run for victory. The Hibernians played their second string men in the late part of the game.

Tonight St. Ann's plays the Bristol A. C.

SUFFERING OF 15 YEARS ENDED BY NEW KONJOLA

Lady Pays Grateful Tribute To Famous Medicine — All Others Failed Utterly

MRS. G. E. PARSHALL

"For fifteen years I was the helpless victim of stomach and kidney troubles," said Mrs. G. E. Parshall, 36 West Eleventh Street, Erie, Pa. "My stomach was so disordered that I could not eat a meal without suffering from gas bloating and indigestion pains afterward. Due to kidney trouble I was subject to severe pains across the small of my back."

"Konjola went right to the source of my ailing organs. It strengthened my kidneys and invigorated my stomach and regulated my liver. I eat, sleep and feel like a different person and I owe all my new health to Konjola, the master medicine."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv)

Holmesburg Prison Is Center of Controversy

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—(INS)—

The gloomy Holmesburg County Prison, now the home of "Scarface Al" Capone, was shaken to its foundations today by another prison scandal that threatens to rival the furor created by the revelations of the brutal treatment of the inmates a few months ago.

The latest sensation was caused by the discovery that a member of the Board of Prison inspectors had taken several visitors to see the notorious Chicago racket king, who is serving a 12-month term for carrying concealed deadly weapons. One of Capone's visitors was none other than Max "Boo Boo" Hoff, diminutive boxing promoter, one termed the king of the city's bootleggers by District Attorney John Monaghan.

A thorough investigation of the lax prison regulations by the Board of Judges was forecast today as a result of the disclosures. The jurists are reported highly aroused by the special privileges granted to Capone despite their orders that he must be treated the same as an ordinary convict.

The re-union between Hoff and Capone is said to have been sanctioned by Horace P. Conard, a new member of the reorganized prison board. Conard denies having taken Hoff to see the Chicago racketeer, however, but admitted having given a pass for visitors to see Capone at the request of Congressman Benjamin M. Golder and Cornelius Harrarty, attorneys for Capone.

Three times in all Conard is reported to have taken visitors to see the Chicagoan, Hoff being present on the third trip. The "guests" were allowed to chat with Capone in the prison of five alone for from 15 to 30 minutes contrary to prison rules.

Hoff in turn denies that he has seen Capone since he began his term.

Hix Couple Provides The Snook Trial Highlights

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, O., July 25.—The dramatic highlight of the Snook murder trial so far is provided not by the defendant himself but by an elderly, silver-haired couple in the twilight of life—Mr. and Mrs. Melvin T. Hix.

Again today they sat side by side in a crowded courtroom listening to the tedious task of jury selection and hearing lawyers say things about the daughter they idolized that must be like knife thrusts to the heart.

By nightfall the jury probably will have been selected to try Dr. James H. Snook, a college professor of "the dangerous age," for the sensational slaying of Miss Theora Hix, beautiful young Ohio State University co-ed. Seven jurors—four women and three men—had been tentatively accepted when court was called to order this morning.

But, strangely enough, as this unusual trial with its "college background" unfolds itself it is not Snook, the smug looking defendant, who is drawing the attention of the spectators who, by the way, are mostly young girls—possibly some of them co-eds themselves. It is the old couple. They are tugging at the heart strings of all.

New Buick Will Be Presented on Saturday

The new 1930 Buick line will be presented to the public next Saturday, July 27th.

According to E. T. Strong, president of the Buick Motor Company, the 1930 Buick will far surpass in power, speed and beauty any previous creation of the company which for more than twenty-five years has dominated the fine car field.

For months past a veritable barrage of rumors has been laid down on the Buick factory—rumors and reports as to what Buick would do in 1930. Predictions have been made concerning the 1930 line that have exhausted the ingenuity of rumor purveyors; but back of all this verbal smoke, the Buick organization has silently worked toward the perfection of this new 1930 car which, it is expected, will captivate the admiration of the motoring public next Saturday.

Details of the new specifications have not been announced, but there is more than an intimation that the 1930 Buick will be a bigger and more powerful car than any of its twenty-six predecessors; that the big ninety-one-horsepower motor in the 40 and 50 models of the 1929 line and the 74-horsepower engine in the smaller model will be even bigger and faster in the new 1930 cars—but, how much bigger will not be learned until the car is offered to the public.

Information about the new body lines is even more meagre. Officials at the Buick plant have intimated that the new car will present an appearance differing in many details from the present model, and such officials as have seen the car are enthusiastic over its lines.

The oldest practicing physician in the world is driving his sixth Buick.

Dr. W. A. Allen, Rochester, Minn., who will be 96 years old his next birthday, has been an enthusiastic motorist since the days of the "horseless carriage" when the automobile, as we know it today, was but an ambitious dream.

Dr. Allen has been active in the profession for more than 74 years. At present he averages 30 calls a day, and continues to drive his own car, rain or shine, day or night. He has the remarkable record of having attended more than 1,700 infant arrivals.

Born in Pendleton County, Indiana, in 1834, Dr. Allen moved to Minnesota in 1861, after having taken a full course in medicine and receiving his degree in 1855. His instruction was received from the liberal use of medical books and from the old family physician whose apothecary shop was the delight of the ambitious youngster. He moved to Rochester in 1865.

The aged physician is now driving a Buick close-coupled, five-passenger sedan, which he recently purchased.
